DEMANDS EXPLANATION.

Faithless Joseph McDermott Travels on Housetops to Avoid Miss Margaret Stockhoff.

Not a word of explanation would Joseph McDermott offer to-day as to why he disappeared last Wednesday afternoon, and falled to put in an appearance that same evening when he was to marry Miss Margaret Stockhoff at her home, No. 53 West One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street.

The bride took off her gown and cried herself almost into hysterics. The guests departed and a festive occasion was turned into one of grief.

Not until to-day was any trace found of McDermott, A reporter of The Even-ing World located him at his boardinghouse, No. 2913 Eighth avenue. Mrs Williams, the owner, said the missing James Kanar Insists Brother Was man," she declared. "He has caused me too much suffering the last week for me ever to forgive him. But I am here to demand an explanation. He cannot act this way with me and keep his lips closed. He must explain."

McDermott was not at home. There probably would have been an interesting to have slipped out. It seems that he has been expecting trouble, for accordto neighbors he has been coming and going from the house yesterday and roof tops and descending to the street through a house further down the block. But Miss Stockhoff, nevertheless, means to have an explanation.
